Stephen brings a competitive edge and strategic mindset from Division I athletics to his commercial litigation practice.

Stephen Foss focuses his practice on handling commercial litigation matters. During law school, Stephen was a research assistant to the former dean of the University of Virginia School of Law, John C. Jeffries Jr. He also served as the news media editor for UVA Law Weekly and was a staff member with the Virginia Sports and Entertainment Law Journal. Before law school, Stephen worked as a partner development representative at a strategy management software company and coached youth soccer.

Stephen earned his J.D. from the University of Virginia School of Law and a B.A. in communication studies, with a concentration in public relations, summa cum laude, from James Madison University, where he played Division I soccer.
